

Understanding Racism, Countering Racism Study Group

Read White Fragility: Why It's So Hard for White People to Talk About Racism and Discuss Race, Racism, and Education with Other Educators

What: Read and discuss White Fragility by Robin DiAngelo. Participants will share other articles and texts to widen the discussion from a range of perspectives. We will discuss white privilege, racism, how white people discuss and think about racism, and ways to counter racism in our work as educators.

Where: Meetings are via Zoom. The Zoom link will be emailed to participants.

When: Starts Tuesday October 6, 2020, every other Tuesday for six sessions, from 7:30-8:30 PM each session (it is okay if you join later in the series or if you miss sessions).

How to Join: Email kertes@criticaleducationproject.ca or text Tom Kertes at 778-884-5343.

Critical
Education
Project

The Critical Education Project is a network of North Coast and Skeena educators sharing resources for supporting all students and communities, especially in terms of working with students and supporting families to help develop students' skills and knowledge in literacy, numeracy, leadership, community-building, and land-based education. All educators are welcome.

For more information: CriticalEducationProject.ca